RESPONSE OPTIONS AND SUPPORTIVE MEASURES

There are many options available to students or employees who bring forward a Title IX related complaint. The wishes of the reporter are honored as closely as possible. Once the reporter meets with the Title IX Coordinator, Deputy Coordinator, or Confidential Resource Advisor any of the following remedies or combination of remedies are available to the complainant:

- Information can and will be kept as private as possible.
- A COA No Contact Order can be instituted. This limits the ability of the responding party to have any contact with the complainant.
- Mediation: Trained staff can assist in discussing the concerning behavior and its impact.
- A conversation with the respondent informing them of how their behavior may be impacting others.
- The COA Formal Complaint Process.
- Referral to COA Counseling Services. This is a free service to students.
- Change in class schedule.
- Change in room assignments for residential students.
- Change in work study placement or supervision.
- Assistance with contacting local law enforcement.
- Nothing. Sometimes an individual just wants to tell their story and find out about their resources and then asks the College to not engage in any formal or informal process.
- There may even be other remedies available depending on the situation

Please Note: Meditation or informal resolution is not an option for complaints of sexual assault—rape given the potential risks and threats involved even if the complainant and respondent would agree to do so.*
